

Afternoon Tea

by Head Chef Jason Williamson

"There are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea."

Henry James

Afternoon tea, that most quintessential of English customs is, perhaps surprisingly, a relatively new tradition. In England during the 1660s King Charles II and his wife the Portuguese Infanta Catherine de Braganza enjoyed Afternoon teas daily. It was not until the mid-19th century that the concept of 'afternoon tea' truly appeared.

Afternoon tea was introduced to England by Anna, the 7th Duchess of Bedford, in the year 1840. The Duchess would become hungry around four o'clock in the afternoon. The evening meal in her household was served fashionably late at eight o'clock thus leaving a long period of time between lunch and dinner. The Duchess asked that a tray of tea, bread with butter and cake be brought to her room during the late afternoon. This became a habit of hers and she began inviting friends to join her.

This pause for tea became a fashionable social event. During the 1880's upper-class and society women would change into long gowns, gloves and hats for their afternoon tea which was usually served in the drawing room between four and five o'clock.

Nowadays however, in the average home, afternoon tea is likely to be just a biscuit or small cake and a mug of tea, usually produced using a teabag. Sacrilege!

To experience the best of the afternoon tea tradition, indulge in our own Château La Chaire - Jersey inspired afternoon tea. Myself and my team work closely with local suppliers and foragers to bring you best afternoon tea that the island's produce can offer.

So please sit back and enjoy the best that this beautiful island has to offer all put together to give you an afternoon tea never to be forgotten.

Cream tea whilst elusive of origin, we do know that it is entirely Devonshire based hence why we use Devonshire clotted cream. However, we also know that in the 11th century there is evidence that the tradition of eating bread with cream and jam existed in Tavistock Abbey in Devon. Here at the Château we want to give you the whole cream tea experience and will always give you unctuous Devonshire clotted cream as to ensure you truly experience the original cream tea ambience.
